WORK BEGINS ON CITY-COUNTY AIRPORT

Conference Of Reds Scheduled

By K. C. THALER
United Press International
LONDON (UPI) — Leaders of international communism will hold a new Red summit meeting in Moscow this autumn, diplomatic sources said today.

The sources said the Red summit gathering either would coincide with the Soviet Communist party congress in Moscow in late October, or would take place immediately afterward.

According to these sources, the Moscow summit talks would have two key aims:

— To align Communist policy on the eve of a showdown over Berlin or of major East-West negotiations on the future of the divided city.

— To review the ideological conflict in international communism.

Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev is expected to deal with international problems within the Communist bloc at the October party congress.

Beyond this, however, Khrushchev is reported anxious to amass as much backing as possible from his Communist allies as well as Communist leaders outside the Soviet bloc.

It was not known whether all, or only the most prominent Red leaders, would assemble in Moscow.

Last December, the leaders of 81 Communist parties inside and outside the Red bloc met in Moscow to debate the Communist ideological rift.

Produced Manifesto

That summit conference produced the Moscow manifesto which paved over the differences between Russia and Red China and gave Khrushchev majority backing for his policy of "peaceful co-existence" with Western nations.

This "accord" has since evaporated. There are strong indications of fresh and serious trouble along the Moscow-Peking axis.

For the first time since reports of the dispute leaked out, Chinese Communist leaders have considered it necessary to deny the rift publicly. But the denials have carried little conviction.

Princeton Finally Buys KU Property

PRINCETON Ky. (UPI) — Princeton Friday night took the final step in its long battle to buy the Kentucky Utilities Co. facilities here and set up its own municipally owned electric system.

The Princeton Electric Plant Board, created to handle the acquisition of the KU facilities and subsequently operate the electric system, signed the final purchase agreement Friday night. The signing took place in the office of Carl Cunningham, a board member.

Eugene Williamson, a druggist who is chairman of the board, said he was notified early Friday that the contracts had been prepared.

Williamson also announced the appointment of A. L. Tilley of Madisonville, manager of the Madisonville electric system for nearly five years as manager of the new municipal system here.

The purchase price and operating capital of the new system totals approximately $1 million.

Williamson added the system will be operated until July 1, 1966, with KU power bought at wholesale.

After the five-year period expires, power purchased from the Tennessee Valley Authority will be used. The TVA contract, signed several months ago, has been predated to start the day the KU contract terminates.

The City Council recently named the Bankers Bond Co. of Louisville, as fiscal agent to sell the bonds required to obtain capital to operate the new system.

The firm plans to market the bonds in August or September.

Princeton's residents voted to buy out KU's local facilities in 1959 after a heated campaign.

Princeton, like Fulton, Paducah and Glasgow, was excluded from the geographical "freeze" on the further expansion of TVA's service area.

CARRINGTON, Ky. (UPI) — Camp Kysoc, a resident camp for physically handicapped and blind children, will open Monday near here. Some 120 children are expected to attend the session of the camp sponsored by the Kentucky Society for Crippled Children.

Louisville, Ky. (UPI) — Mayor Bruce Hottelitz said today that 12 persons have agreed to serve on his Committee on Human Rights which will hold its first meeting Tuesday. The committee will work toward a solution to Louisville's integration problems.

Owensboro, Ky. (UPI) — Jerry Prior, 15, son of Mr. and Mrs. Glover Prior, Ulica, Ky., was recovering here today from arm, leg and stomach cuts suffered Friday while mowing weeds. Prior got off the large weed-cutting machine to untangle a clump of weeds and was pulled beneath it.

Nicholasville, Ky. (UPI) — Joseph Nolan, Cincinnati, regional post office director, will be the speaker for the dedication here today of a new post office building.

Owensboro, Ky. (UPI) — Donald Ray Higdon, 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald J. Higdon, of Owensboro, was reported in fair condition late Friday with injuries suffered when he was struck by a car while riding his bicycle. He suffered a broken right leg and a head injury when he was struck by a car driven by Ben Ferguson, 64, Owensboro.

Woman Kidnap Is Held In Jail

PIKEVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — George Bentley, accused of the kidnaping of two women who were taken to Kentucky from Cleveland, Ohio, was held here today in lieu of $25,000 bond pending a hearing July 24.

Bentley was returned to the Pike County Jail Friday after arraignment before U.S. Commissioner Jack Page. Bentley was arrested by FBI agents and state police at his sister's home at Jackson in Letcher County Thursday.

Bentley and Logan Mullins, 26, an unemployed Lorain, Ohio, laborer, are charged with seizing, kidnaping and taking two women from Avon Lake, Ohio, near Cleveland, to Jackson, last July 2.

Mullins was arrested Thursday by FBI agents in a Lorain hotel. He was arraigned before U.S. Commissioner Herbert Horn at Cleveland Thursday with bond set at $25,000. Mullins faces a hearing July 20.

Bentley and Mullins are charged with forcing a car containing Dorothy Staniel, 50, Cleveland, and Sandra Goslin, 21, Brownsville, Pa., off the road. The women claim they were beaten with what may have been an automobile jack handle and forced to accompany Bentley and Mullins to Jackson with Bentley's estranged wife.

Staniel and Goslin were released from custody after a hearing before Judge Ben Koenig removed from the court calendar a paternity suit against Jessel by Miss Tyler. The suit, filed June 26, asked reasonable support for the child and medical expenses of $2,150. No mention was made of when the baby's birth was expected.

Miss Tyler earlier announced she was dropping the suit and intimating she and Jessel would marry.

The federal government will pay three quarters of the cost of planning for the renewal projects in the cities where a labor surplus exists. Kentucky is the first state to receive a loan under the new Area Development Act.

Communities taking part in the program will put up $46,596 and the state will finance $8,158 of the cost.

The 47 cities in Kentucky taking part in the program are: Barbourville, Benton, Cadiz, Calvert City, Catterburg, Central City, Corbin, Cumberland, Dawson Springs, Dixon, Drakesboro, Earlington, Elkhorn City, Elkton, Grayson, Flatwoods, Greenup and Greenville.

Other cities include Harlan, Hazard, Henderson, Hindman, Hopkinsville, Hyden, Inez, Jackson, Jenkins, London, Madisonville, Manchester, Martin, Mayfield, Middleboro, Morehead, Paducah, Paintsville, Pikeville, Pineville, Prestonsburg, Princeton, Providence, Salsberyville, Sandy Hook, South Shore, Whitesburg, Wickliffe and Williamsburg.

Contract Is Officially Let Yesterday; Ground Broken

The formal awarding of the contract for the construction of the Murray-Calloway County Airport was made yesterday by the Airport Board at a meeting at the city hall.

The M & H Construction Company of Murray was the low bidder when bids were opened on May 15; however actual awarding of the contract was delayed until the bids could be studied more closely and to see that all specifications were clear.

M & H bid $44,616.26 for a turf strip with an additional $65,150.00 for the paved landing strip. The local airport will be paved.

Following the awarding of the contract, the group at the city hall moved to the site of the airport near Penney for ground breaking ceremonies.

Immediately on approval of the work order, M & H Construction has started construction on the airport. A bulldozer was on the scene today and work will be pushed forward to completion.

The specifications for construction of the modern facility are rigidly set by the Federal Aeronautics Administration since some Federal money is being made available.

Present today were members of the Airport Board, Buford Hurt, chairman, Glen Doran, Verne Kyle, Billy Thurman, Hugh Oakley and George Hart. Z. Eniz is secretary of the board.

The finance committee which raised funds locally was composed of Audry Simmons, T. Waldrup and Ronald Churchill.

The Federal Government is supplying $22,549.00 for the project with $45,000 having been raised locally and the state supplying $25,000.

All phases of the airport have been approved by both Federal and State aviation agencies and further aid is expected to be forthcoming as the airport is completed and its use becomes more routine.

The work of the airport board has been going on for about two years ever since the dual body was appointed by Mayor Holmes Ellis and County Judge Waylon Rayburn.

The letting of the contract yesterday marks the culmination of the primary work of the board.

Ground breaking ceremonies will be held at a later date.

The first meeting of an advisory committee which will work with the city administration in formulating a new municipal waste collection and disposal program met last night for the first time at 7:30 at the city hall.

The purpose of the advisory committee is to assist the Mayor and City Council in setting up policy and rates for the system.

The Advisory Committee is composed of Hoffman Swann, Hoyt Roberts, J. B. Wilson, Perry Hendon, Dr. Thomas Hoggan, R. L. Cooper, Ronald Churchill, Warren Gilbert, Cook Sanders, Vernon Hale and Tip Miller. Meeting with this group last night were Mayor Holmes Ellis, Councilman Maurice Crass, Jr., Councilman Leonard Vaughn, Councilman Lester Nany and Assistant Street Superintendent Rex Billington.

Mayor Ellis indicated that he hoped a more workable system would be evolved by having this committee of citizens to advise and suggest ways and means of making the program more feasible.

Kentucky Cities Have Loans Approved

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Housing and Home Finance Agency has approved a loan totaling $164,260 to aid 47 Kentucky cities in urban renewal, it was announced Friday.

The federal government will pay three quarters of the cost of planning for the renewal projects in the cities where a labor surplus exists. Kentucky is the first state to receive a loan under the new Area Development Act.

Murray Still Undeclared In Legion Effort

By RED HOWE, JR.

Murray pounded Mayfield 138 in the American Legion tournament last night. In the first game, Paducah edged Benton 4-3. Paducah pushed across one run in the bottom of the ninth on a single by Johnson.

He led the Paducah attack with three hits. Chambers also had three hits. Goodman, in relief of Harris, was the winning pitcher. Benton managed only five hits off the Paducah pitchers, with only one getting more than one.

Murray banged out 13 hits, with Blackburn leading the team at the plate with three hits. Workman, Rose, R. Danner, and Lee supplied plenty of help with two hits each.

Lyons was the winning pitcher in relief of two previous Murray hurlers. He pitched the final three innings.

Tonight's action sends Mayfield against Paducah at 7:30 p. m. The winner will meet Murray on Monday night for the championship.

CHECK COVERAGE LIMITS ON YOUR HEALTH INSURANCE

NEW YORK CITY — A word of caution was issued today to holders of health insurance policies covering members of the family — check your policy to be sure of the coverage for aged dependents and aging teenagers.

The Health Insurance Institute pointed out that under some policies a dependent's coverage may terminate at age 19, while other policies may still cover the dependent until age 23 or 25, provided the dependent still is in school or college.

For the teenager whose coverage under the family policy is approaching its limit, the institute

WAYNESBURG, Pa. (UPI) — It was readin', riting and romance for Kate Anderson when she walked into a small classroom in Waynesburg way back when.

Today, nearly a half-century later, it's still readin', riting and romance for Kate and Harold Whyte, who between them have devoted 80 years to the teaching profession.

The Whytes called it a career at the end of the past school term to travel and enjoy yourselves while we're still young and in good health," according to Kate.

"I was an 8th grade pupil and Harold was the teacher the first time we met," Kate recalled.

"Neither of us had any idea we would eventually marry. But we celebrated our 40th wedding anniversary on July 14."

Kate and Harold walked down the aisle July 14, 1921, after she had attended Waynesburg State College and Clark University in Wooster, Mass.

Although the Whytes have no children of their own, they have spent almost their entire adult lives teaching "the kind of youngsters we like the most" — 7th and 8th grade students at the South Ward Junior High School, where he was principal, and the nearby Franklin Township school, where she was an arithmetic teacher.

Have things changed since

Whyte began his 44-year career?

"Schools have changed, of course," he said, "and the kids have, too. They have a wider knowledge now because of television and radio, but that's only natural." Whyte declined to elaborate any further because "what I think may not necessarily be everybody else's opinion."

The Whytes are going to maintain a home here, but will spend the winters in warm climates. They plan to travel periodically and look to the future. They aren't forsaking the past, though. When asked if they would choose the same profession if they had it to do over, Kate and Harold replied in unison: "You bet."

THE HAUNTED STARS
by EDMOND HAMILTON

From the novel published by Torrey Books © 1960 by Edmond Hamilton. Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

CHAPTER 17
THE DARK LAND fled past beneath the ship, giving back only an occasional gleam of moonlight from some quiet lake.

Then Nils Christensen, the chief of Lunar Project, gave a low cry and in the same instant Robert Fairlie thought he saw a flicker of light in the night below.

Not light.

Lights.

They vanished behind the swift rush of the ship, leaving only an impression of reddish-yellow pinpoints grouped together.

Christensen said, "Did you see it?"

"I saw it."

"A town?"

"I don't know. Probably not. Could be a lot of other things, fire, volcanic action."

Christensen was not reassured. "Whatever it was, DeWitt won't rest until he finds out." He shut his eyes. "For a while there I thought—But I guess we aren't going to find it that simple."

After a while he added, "I guess we couldn't expect it to be."

The ship plunged over the rim of morning. And as though it had been waiting for them to find it, they saw the huge, fused blackened scar in the midst of the tawny plain, and between the scar and the low hills beyond they saw the wild, grassy interspersed with scattered stones in a way that was unmistakably not natural.

And here they landed.

There was a period of waiting while various tests were run.

During the wait DeWitt came to the lounge for a meeting with Christensen, Winsted, Raab, and Thomason were there, and Fairlie. Outside the port it was mid-morning. The yellowish-white sun shone, wind ripped the grass in long running waves to the edge of the black scar where all life stopped.

It might, Fairlie thought, have been Kansas on a fall morning, except that everything was subtly wrong. The whiteness made the sky coppery color by contrast or refraction. The tints of soil and grass were not right, nor the shapes of things—a shrub, a tree, the grass-blades themselves, a sudden flight of strange birds as big as geese winging low with plumage like blue fire.

"I think we ought to agree on a plan of action," DeWitt said. "And I think we might as well be honest, too. You're not well, Chris. You're not physically able to lead any expeditions. So I would suggest we vote on a change of—"

"I'm still on my feet," said Christensen. "I plan to stay that way. There will be no change of leaders."

DeWitt said softly, "So you saw the lights too."

"There's no proof that they were man-made."

"But you think they might be. If the planet was truly ruined and empty you wouldn't care, you'd be glad to take to your bed and rest. But you're afraid."

Christensen turned toward the port. "Look out there. Tell me what made that hideousness."

DeWitt continued to look levelly at him for a moment, and then turned and glanced almost indifferently at the black farspread blotch that glistened faintly with a glassy shine in the sunlight.

"We don't know what did that until we make some tests," he said. "But we can make a pretty good guess. Probably the same type of weapon that destroyed Gassendi."

"And after all this time not a single blade of grass will grow?" Christensen shook his head. "What was here before that weapon struck? A great city, I would guess, covering half this plain, and a starport covering the other half, where the ships came and went. One blow, and now there is nothing. Doesn't that frighten you when you think of it, DeWitt?"

"Yes, it does. It frightens me to think of such power in anybody else's hands. That's why I want to find it first." DeWitt's voice was brutal with impatience. "You're a dreamer, Chris. You think if you don't want war it won't come. You think if you respect your wishes, I tell you it isn't a matter of wanting war or not wanting it. I tell you it's a matter of self-defense. If a man comes at me with a big club, I want a bigger one to hit him back with."

Christensen said heavily, "There's sense in that. I admit it. But there are other considerations." He paused, then said slowly, "We'll explore this immediate locality first. If there are people they may contact us here. If not, we'll try and find those lights again. Oh, and DeWitt—"

Vary softly. Soft as the paw of the tiger before the strike.

"What?"

"If there are people, remember that this world belongs to them. We didn't bring a ship back to the stars just to start up another war, even a small one." He turned around to face DeWitt, smiling a hard smile. "And remember, they might be the ones with the biggest club."

The tests were satisfactory, to no one's surprise. Atmosphere, pressure, gravitation, temperature, and radiation count were all slightly different from Earth's constants but all of them were well within the limits of tolerance. They could open the hatches and step out. They did. And for the first time the true alienage of the planet hit them full force and head on.

Chiefly, Fairlie thought, it was the sunlight and the colors. All at once burned white-gold with yellow in a copy sky, and all the landscape ran to tawny reds and shades of gold and brown and vivid greens. The coloring of the clouds was superbly impossible.

There were sounds, small rustlings and cryings and callings. Unseen things stirred in the grasses, and among the stones and there was no way of knowing what they were, whether harmless or deadly, until they were caught and studied.

It's beautiful, Fairlie thought. It's beautiful, and strange, and for Pete's sake what am I doing here?

It remained to be seen what the bacteria would do to them, Winsted said. In the meantime they would take antibiotics and hope.

By the second day after landing, preliminary preparations were going forward nicely. The towering ship, their base and home, was the center of antlike activity.

The light helicopters and true-cars, stowed in disassembled form, had been unloaded and were being assembled. Reicher had thoroughly tested the water and pronounced it good. Winsted, commanding all the help he could get, had plunged into work in this biologist's paradise and hell.

Not until then did Christensen, with DeWitt and Fairlie and the two other specialists who had no urgent work at the moment, Raab and Thomason, start out for a look at the broken stones beyond the black scar. With them went Graeme, the chief flight officer, and a husky young flight technician named Smith.

They walked. The black fused material of the scarred area had millions of infinitesimal cutting surfaces that abraded skin or leather like tiny razors. They avoided it. It was a bleak ugly thing, reminder ancient violence, ancient agony. This was part of the battleground, Fairlie thought. Men died here, and their dying left a mark a hundred miles long. What a day it must have been, the day it happened.

"We'll know a lot more when the films have been processed and studied," DeWitt said. The mapping cameras had been operating, of course, during every moment of their landing spiral. "With any luck, they should show us the position of those lights. In the meantime we're trying all radio frequencies, in the hope of making some contact."

A city that was made a lifeless shambles without any sign of enemy action—that happened? Continue the story here tomorrow.

Tips On Preventing Burglaries

Connect Timer To Lamp

Leave a lamp or two connected to an automatic timer to turn lights on and off each evening. This makes the house look lived-in and is a good protective measure.

Lock All Doors

Be sure all exterior doors are securely locked. Use a pin-tumbler cylinder lock or safety latch.

Stop Deliveries

Be sure to have your mail held and all deliveries suspended during your absence. Notify local police of the dates you'll be away.

Partly Draw Shades

Make certain that drapes or shades are not completely drawn. Leave them as you normally would when you are home.

Close Garage Doors

Always close your garage doors. An empty garage with doors open will catch the attention of any thief and indicate no one is home.

Put Away Tools

Never leave ladders or tools lying around where prowlers can get at them—they may be used to get into your home.

Destination: GOD

What's this little fellow up to? Where's he going? Why? He knows. Maybe he couldn't put it into words, but he's just as sure as any little man can be. He is taking in God's world with all his little-child faith. He knows that tree and how God made it strong against the storm. Those clouds? He knows God painted them in the sky for him to enjoy. He knows that more of God's wonders are right up ahead—and that's where he's going. Just walking among God.

In the truest sense of the words, our young friend doesn't have to FIND God—he IS WITH GOD. We are older. A lot of things clutter up our lives. We are busy losing God. When we do search for Him we scarcely know where to turn.

It would be nice to join this young fellow—to share his thoughts, his hopes, his dreams, his God. We can't do that. We don't have a child's faith. But we can come CLOSER to God and ease our restless hearts. We can go to our church—God's temple, our place of worship. God will be there.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL... ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest force on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a source of spiritual values. Without a genuine Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church. Plan to go to church regularly next week. Right this day.
